

ERP to E2RP: A Case Study Approach to Integrated Business Management

In today's competitive business landscape, organizations are constantly seeking ways to improve their efficiency, productivity, and customer satisfaction. Enterprise Resource Planning (ERP) systems have long been recognized as a valuable tool for achieving these goals. However, as businesses evolve and become more complex, the limitations of traditional ERP systems become apparent. This has led to the emergence of a new generation of ERP systems known as Extended Enterprise Resource Planning (E2RP) systems.

E2RP systems go beyond the traditional boundaries of ERP by integrating a wide range of business functions and processes across the entire extended enterprise, including suppliers, customers, partners, and stakeholders. This comprehensive approach provides businesses with a holistic view of their operations and enables them to make more informed decisions.
